Language Arts: The students seem to be enjoying our novel Esperanza Rising. I enjoy teaching this unit as it points out social injustices that Esperanza's family encounters as their life changes when her father dies. This coming week we will investigate the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) and how it impacts Esperanza's life. As a reminder, students will have independent work each day to complete when we sign off our live meets. Additionally, students will need to read independently for 30 minutes daily and record their reading in their reading logs

Science: We wrap up learning about cells and the important role they play as the building blocks of all living things at the beginning of the week. From there we will take a look at the Skeletal and Muscular systems.

Math: We have one more day of data and graphing before we take on patterns. We will investigate numerical patterns and look at how they work in real world scenarios.

I would anticipate a quiz at the end of next week or the start of the following week. There will be daily math independent work in addition to 20 minutes of Dreambox.
